Legal Internships

Each semester the Peace Corps Office of Inspector General (OIG) selects one or two law students to participate in its legal intern program in Washington, D.C. OIG's legal intern program is ideal for law students who are interested in pursuing a career in criminal justice, government oversight, legislative affairs, or administrative law. In addition, students selected for the summer program will participate in the Summer Law Clerk Program organized by the Council of Counsels to the Inspectors General. Applications are accepted on a rolling basis.

What We Do

OIG conducts audits, evaluations, and investigations domestically and overseas, providing management with recommendations to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the agency, while also protecting the Peace Corps from anyone who would like to do it harm by defrauding or misusing its resources.

It is our job to look into allegations of misconduct and criminal wrongdoing involving Peace Corps staff, contractors, and Volunteers, and it is our mission to make sure that agency funds are spent appropriately. Join our team and make a difference.
